This study compares the thermal-denaturation effect of the microwave oven of a domestic microwave oven and a conventional oven on DNA extracted from broiler poultry breast meat. Samples of breast were cooked at each of two microwave oven temperatures (100 degrees C and 150 degrees C) for a time (5-30 min) sufficient to bring samples to one-half or to one-third of the way to the denaturation point. The cooking and heating rates were held constant at 1.5 degrees C s-1. The DNA was then analyzed using a thermal denaturing gradient gel electrophoresis technique. DNA denaturation was observed at a lower temperature (82 degrees C) for samples heated in the microwave oven (150 degrees C) than for samples heated in the conventional oven (85 degrees C). However, the microwave oven (100 degrees C) did not have a thermal-denaturation effect that was significant compared to the conventional oven (85 degrees C). Thus, this thermal denaturation appears to be a microwave oven-specific effect.Q: Add item in array index in php This is what I'm trying to do. $data[] = array('task' => $task, 'category' => 'general'); The output comes out like this: array(1) { ["0"]=> array(3) { ["task"]=> string(8) "Finalizing" ["category"]=> string(15) "General" 570a42141b
