I was so excited, had just finished high school and wanted to visit as many countries as possible. My backpack was about a quarter full, and I was ready to begin my trip around the world. When I reached the Tokyo airport, I picked up the two newspapers that were waiting for me. I flipped through the one from Korea first, and then, from Tokyo, the one from Europe. I was getting sad when I discovered that I would miss Asia. Finally, it was time to go home. The Next Time: Follow me on Twitter After graduation, I moved to Japan, where I still live today. I had never felt so empty before, so sad that I would never be able to go back to Asia. For the next four years I tried to forget about it. Then, in 2014, I got a chance to visit Vietnam
