In the 21st century, the role of CAD software in both the engineering process and manufacturing industry has drastically changed. Now, CAD programs are commonly used by architects, interior designers, industrial designers, engineers, students, hobbyists, and numerous other industries and professions. In addition, CAD software plays a key role in several industries including automotive, aerospace, construction, medicine, defense, entertainment, and general industry. [1] For the purposes of this article, we will be focusing on Autodesk AutoCAD software, and the benefits and drawbacks of using AutoCAD for CAD drafting. What is AutoCAD? AutoCAD is a powerful 2D and 3D CAD drafting program. Developed by Autodesk, AutoCAD is the most popular CAD software on the market. According to Autodesk, AutoCAD has been downloaded more than 2 million times. AutoCAD is designed to allow users to easily make 2D drawings of architectural, mechanical, and electrical plans. AutoCAD can also be used for drafting, as well as for designing mechanical systems and electrical projects. AutoCAD is released in two versions, depending on the need of the user. Both versions are available as desktop software, as well as mobile apps (AutoCAD 2018 and AutoCAD LT 2018). AutoCAD is also available as a cloud-based subscription model. AutoCAD Architecture The architecture of AutoCAD is designed to allow users to be efficient and intuitive with their use of the program. To accomplish this, AutoCAD has been developed with the following components: Single Window: All major components of AutoCAD are integrated into a single screen, ensuring that users are able to have access to all functions and components with a single mouse click. In fact, all AutoCAD objects are represented in a single window (referred to as the single window). Human corneal epithelial cells as antigen-presenting cells: I. Recognition of contact lens proteins. We have utilized human corneal epithelial cells (HCEC) as antigen-presenting cells (APC) to test for the presence of corneal-associated antigens in these cells. We have shown that HCEC are capable of stimulating autologous T cells in a MHC-restricted manner, indicating that they are APC. The HCEC were found to be capable of presenting the model contact lens antigens, bovine serum albumin (BSA) and lens crystallins to autologous T cells. The major route of antigen presentation was found to be via the MHC class II pathway. We also tested the presentation of antigen to autologous T cells by HCEC by the presentation of soluble protein using a fluid-phase assay. BSA and lens crystallins were found to be presented via the MHC class II pathway. HCEC were shown to present both BSA and lens crystallins to autologous T cells when cultured in medium containing interferon-gamma. The results of these studies demonstrate that HCEC can present antigens, and that the major route of antigen presentation for corneal antigens to T cells is by the MHC class II pathway.

The teratogenic effects of pentachlorophenol (PCP) on mice. Pentachlorophenol (PCP), a phenolic pesticide, is capable of inducing malformations in human beings and experimental animals. To investigate the teratogenic effects of PCP on mice, pregnant Kunming mice were treated with PCP by intraperitoneal injection and subcutaneous implantation on days 7-14 of gestation
