Q: Assign value to the child components of a child component I'm wondering if there is a clean way to do the following, since I have more than one child component on my top-level component and I'm trying to figure out a way to cleanly manage access to an array of objects. Here is my current implementation:

export class MyComponent implements OnInit { private static things: {[key: string]: Thing} = {} constructor() { this.initialize(); } initialize() { this.getThings().done(() => { this.things = this.getThings().value() .map(t => this.things[t.key]); }).catch(error => { console.log(error); }) } getThings(): Observable { return this.thingsRepo.getThings();
