In our game the owner becomes the agent of the stranger. The agent - a student of Zoroastrianism, Russian trader who has borrowed money from the bank, and deals with expired and rare products. It is simpler than it seems. The game is divided into many chapters. Each chapter has at least one quest. So, you have to complete the quest and the game will end. The quests have additional bonuses, so you can use them, if you wish. Game features:

- The main feature: experiments - many quests with various tasks for players

There are 7 different combat skills in game, which are divided into Melee, Ranged, and Elemental Skills. Each skill is activated by pressing the assigned hotkey. The Melee Skills are activated by pressing "LMB" (Left Mouse Button), Ranged Skills are activated by pressing "RMB" (Right Mouse Button), and Elemental Skills are activated by pressing "F" (Face Button). There is a melee-only Skill which is available in every combat phase, there is also a Ranged-only Skill, and there are 3 Elemental Skills, each of them with its own set of 3 associated Elemental Arrows. The in-game environment is a randomly-generated 3d landscape, with game-worlds to explore. Some environments have a battle-area, where the enemies are spawn, and there is a boss at the end of each battle-area. The game is visually inspired by video game classics, like Dwarf Fortress, Diablo, System Shock, and Bioshock. The game is originally inspired by Games developed by my peers at the University, including "White Gauntlet" and "Desert of War". White Gauntlet is a 2D tank-shooter, while

Desert of War is a mock-turn-based strategy simulator with unit units. I chose to move away from pure strategy simulations, and instead took the path of action and fighting simulator. Game end I have settled for one of the simplest: Theme/Chronological. All of the above have been mentioned over and over on this blog, and nothing I come up with comes close to fitting what I want to describe. The in-game visuals of MtB are so obviously tiered into four time periods (or whatever there are). Mounted Combat is a Cavalry game, which is a Melee Combat game which is also obviously a Renaissance period game. What's less obvious to me is how that visual theme translates into the dialogue system. So I'm taking a step back and thinking hard about what I want the interface to convey visually, and not by way of words. I could go
