Expression of the lung resistance protein gene in the human endometrium. The lung resistance protein (LRP), also known as ABC-C2, is an ATP-dependent efflux pump which plays an important role in the uptake and elimination of drugs and toxic substances. LRP is ubiquitously expressed in the human tissues, but its expression in the endometrium is hitherto unknown. The objective of this study was to determine the expression of LRP mRNA in the human endometrium, with special reference to the late proliferative and secretory phase. Total RNA was extracted from whole endometrial tissue samples from 12 human endometrial biopsies obtained at cycle days 16-20. Expression of LRP mRNA was determined by reverse transcriptase-polymerase chain reaction and densitometric analysis. The LRP protein was identified by immunohistochemistry in the same samples. LRP mRNA was detected in all of the 12 endometrial tissue samples, with values ranging from $0.5-1.5 \times 10^4$ copies/microg total RNA. A weak, yet significant, increase (P
