From the Myth of an Elden King, Tarnished, who oppressed and oppressed the Elden Ring, rose in revolt. For an indeterminate period of time, battles continued in the Lands Between. It is a period of time where there are no evil kings like the one who once oppressed the Elden Ring. As a result, the Lands Between were a peaceful sanctuary, unlike before. However, while the power to bear arms was spreading among the Elden, the background remained the same. It was a time when the Fists of the main characters had not yet come out. In this state of inequality, the Elden were in a position where they could not feel the power of their own weapon of choice, the Elden Ring. It was a time when the human race was dominated by the one whose power of arms was the strongest, and the time had come to release them. In order to achieve the true potential of the Elden, the Ring was needed to forge a new powerful king. In order to reawaken and evolve the power of arms, there was a need for it to be used as a sword. * The title of the main character is also "Tarnished".
