SharePoint 2013 Library? I am creating a workflow which would require to call a web service and wait until the result gets back on a page (wait state). The problem is that I am using a library with many pages (I don't know exactly how many) which contents may change from time to time. I don't want to have a loop that goes through each page of the library and every time check if the result of the last call is null because it will be confusing and very time consuming if for some pages the result of the last call is something I don't want (the library has both "active" and "archive" pages). So, is there a way to know which is the current page so I can put a wait state on the web service call only on that page and continue working on the other pages? A: You could use the $ctx.currentItem property: You could also check for the URL in your c# code using var currentItem = _clientContext.Web.GetListItem(context.ListId); var currentItemUrl = current 6d1f23a050
