Could someone tell me if the following sentence is correct or not? "I actually like her" I have tried to look up the phrase "actually like" and realized that the word actually means is something that has happened or is something that was meant to happen. In this sentence, I suspect the 'like her' is something that was meant to happen. But I am not sure if my interpretation is correct or not and if it is, what it is that I am trying to say. A: It is not correct. You are using the word "actually" in a context where it doesn't belong. You can say: I like her. or I
