I need to organize my files for OS X Yosemite (10.10) and after reading a couple of articles on this site, I have decided to pick up Disk Genius and do it, this is the results I got: root@8717B8408C1B0:~/Desktop# diskutil mountVolume /dev/disk0s2 Password: Mounting volume Apple_HFS at [/Volumes/Apple_HFS] on disk0s2. Mount failed: OSStatus = -1202 root@8717B8408C1B0:~/Desktop# diskutil unmountVolume /dev/disk0s2 Unmounting volume Apple_HFS root@8717B8408C1B0:~/Desktop# diskutil unmountVolume /dev/disk0s2 Unmounting volume Apple_HFS root@8717B8408C1B0:~/Desktop# diskutil unmountVolume /dev/disk0s2 Unmounting volume Apple_HFS a: You can't repair your disk directly with DiskGenius since it does not support macOS Recovery. You can verify the disk's health with Disk Utility. Disk Utility will list all the partitions on your drive and give the information you need like the disk type (such as "Journaled"), the volume size and the disk's capacity. You can also give a check mark to each partition to indicate its health. The disk in question (G:) looks alright: The read-only partition (what you were trying to fix) is OK. However, the volume is not OK: The output of diskutil list in Recovery will show you the current state of the disk and a list of available repairs. The first partition (APFS) is the journaled filesystem in the macOS Recovery and the partition next to it (G:) is your volume. From the output of diskutil list in Recovery you can use the checkboxes next to each partition to repair them. You can then access the Utilities under the menubar like System Information, Disk Clone to run a repair of the disk. Self love There's a quality that some people have that makes me just feel, damn, that they're beyond any kind of trouble. They're kind, wise, sexy and, let's face it, fuckable. There's always a glimmer of that quality (or no quality at all) in every woman I date
