i will tell you why, during development of mastercam, i had certain application programmers that thought they knew what a fully automatic external programmer was. i've been doing this a while and i have saved a few people the expense and hassles of being wrong. first, the programmer that i am referring to is a novice in any way. second, he simply copies and pastes from elsewhere and i'm taking issue with him stealing other peoples work. lastly, the programmer doesn't seem to understand the easy use concepts of logic and mathematics. and when i say he doesn't, he tried to explain them to me, only to fall on his face. you can either download the cnc mastercam software completely free of charge or you can purchase one of the licensed mastercam software. i will not recommend the licensed software. why? because you can get better results for free. on the free software, there are numerous bugs which will never be worked out. i usually recommend the licensed version. have fun and enjoy. at this writing, it is estimated that another 3-5 million gates are cracking, right now. so, think about this: if these crackers are turning to your site, how much business might be going over the web to your site. the potential is huge! with scc, you just point your browser to the bit torrent site. during the upload, you can select a region and your torrent will be pretty much in the destination until it completes. it is faster than some others in a similar category. users could upload with the same ip address. generally, mastercam is more expensive than its lcc equivalent. this is due to the fact that mastercam is more robust and feature rich. i'm in the process of uploading to video game sites as well. that's my plan as of now
