1. _Choose File > Open* to open a file. Press the keyboard shortcut Ctrl+O (Windows) or Command+O (Mac OS) to open the Open dialog box. Type the name of the file in the File Name text box. Then select the file in the Choose drop-down list and click Open (Figure 5-1). The file opens in Photoshop. Figure 5-1: Choose Photoshop's Open dialog box to locate and open a file. 2. _Choose Photo > Photomerge* to launch the Photomerge dialog box, where you set the options to create an HDR image (Use Exact Matching Details)._ You can now apply the same options and images to other files. For some quick tips on using the Photomerge dialog box, see the upcoming sidebar "Photomerge HDR workflow: A sample photo." Figure 5-2: The Basic and Expert tab is where you tweak the settings for the Photomerge dialog box. Figure 5-3: The Type and Auto Tone tab is where you tweak the settings for the Tone Curve dialog box. Figure 5-4: The Roll tab is where you set your dynamic range settings. ## Creating an HDR Image: A Sample Photo Chapter 2, "How to Create an HDR Image," provides you with the basic steps to create a good high dynamic range (HDR) image. As this chapter walks you through the process, take notes. This chapter uses the image of a woman sitting on a bench in front of a park in New York City, as shown in Figure 5-5. Remember, the goal is to create an HDR image that more accurately represents the rich detail of the scene and the scene's high-contrast tones. In this case, it's a close-up of a woman's face in front of a park bench.

Wednesday, April 9, 2011 Life and Love at Sea Another thing that I don't think I'll ever get used to is living on a boat. I've been at sea for about a year now and it's been a long journey since I sold the condo and headed out into the open seas. I'll never forget the first time I stood on my deck and looked across the ocean. It was an amazing feeling to be out there in nature. So, I've been looking forward to our summer adventures to see the beauty and learn more about the sea. The first few days were quite busy. We had a visitor show up to board our boat on the morning of our 30th day. He wasn't able to get away from work for the next two weeks so we welcomed him with open arms. He brought some stowaways with him that he captured while working at the local crab trap. It was a great time to reconnect with family members and friends that we hadn't seen for a while. I even got to have a little bit of an adventure. The second week was a bit slower. I had almost every afternoon booked with my trainer, the trainer for some of the kids I teach, and a couple of my classes. This week will be much more active for me and the kids as we head down the coast to San Diego. Here are some of my favorite pictures from this past week.

The present invention is directed generally to an apparatus for evaluating semiconductor integrated circuits, and more particularly to a memory leak identification and repair apparatus. The testing of integrated circuits (ICs) can be a time consuming and expensive process. For example, not only is it possible for an IC to provide only a limited amount of functionality, but if the IC malfunctions during manufacture or use, it may be difficult to isolate the source of the malfunction. One IC testing technique is to evaluate and identify IC defects during manufacture. For example, integrated circuit devices can include memory circuits such as random access memories (RAMs), read only memories (ROMs) and programmable read only memories (PROMs). The IC can be tested after manufacture by performing a memory stress test using predetermined data patterns. The defects can be correlated with data patterns, utilizing storage elements of the IC for storing the pattern, for example, as output logic levels. However, multiple input pattern generators are generally required and the testing process can consume a significant amount of time. Another technique is to employ an apparatus having a memory

[Food neophobia in young children]. There is no consensus in the literature about a cutoff point for food neophobia in young children. The findings of the HELENA study on neophobia in 3428 parents (8 months to 14.9 years of age) and 4186 children (8 months to 13.9 years of age) showed that 40.3% of parents considered their child to be neophobic; this was more often the case in households in which the child was younger than 1 year of age and less than one in five of these children took at least one dislike to any new food, with a more than two-fold increase from the age of 1 to 7 years. The percentage of children who were considered to be neophobic was similar to that found in previous studies in children aged 6 months to 7 years. # Copyright 2018 Google Inc. ===== Q: Polymer Grid - 'row' attribute is not supported when used with sap.m.StandardListItem I'm using an sap.m.List with an sap.m.StandardListItem to display items in a row. I've added standard attributes to the list to specify what kind of data is represented by the list items. When I apply my custom template, I cannot use the 'row' attribute and the data doesn't display as expected (the list doesn't display the images that are present in the data). Here's the markup for the list
