About Photoshop's Creative Cloud subscription Do you have to pay to get the full feature set of Photoshop as well as those for its related programs? No. A new type of subscription for the programs was introduced in 2013. It is called Adobe's Creative Cloud. This is a cloud-based service. It enables users to take

Photoshop, Photoshop Elements, Illustrator, and other programs to their desktop, and use them whenever and wherever they're needed. Once you subscribe to the Creative Cloud, you can access these and other programs for a very low monthly price. A great benefit is that you no longer need to buy your computer equipment. You don't need to subscribe to the Creative Cloud to run these programs on your computer because the software is already running on a server somewhere. The programs are stored on the Creative Cloud server at your location and made available for you to use. All you need to do is access it with your personal password. You can create and edit files just as you can with any other Adobe software program. You can also save files in the Creative Cloud's Shared Libraries, which are available to you from any computer connected to the Creative Cloud you've chosen (no need to purchase a computer or laptop at the time). You can share your files easily with other Creative Cloud members in this way. You can buy any of the programs, which cost about $50 to $60. You can also subscribe to the entire Creative Cloud package for $69 per month, and have the full, unaltered versions of the programs plus extras included. What's great about the Creative Cloud is that it has only one price for every product, just one monthly charge.

Now that's less costly than buying each program separately and more economical than buying them in the carton.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Saturday spoke at the conference "Back to the Future: Where to go from here?" and described the Lok Sabha elections as "a turning point." (PTI)

"Lok Sabha elections — a turning point," Prime Minister Narendra Modi said at the one-day conference "Back to the Future: Where to go from here?" which was organised by the Niti Aayog on Saturday. He said, “Lok Sabha elections — a turning point. We must strive hard for excellence, or we will go back to the past. During the election campaign, we will not focus on petty issues, neither will we turn our opponents into enemies. The focus will be on the future. We are also reaching out to youth. It is a new chapter of our democracy. It is a role we have to play with pride.” Prime Minister Modi spoke on the role of Niti Aayog in the future and said that Niti Aayog will take the lead to give a new direction to the country’s institutions and the government, and also help the government in executing various projects. The Prime Minister said that many schemes are meant to transform India and the fastest growing economies, and said that Niti Aayog will provide them with the right direction. On health insurance scheme, he said that the biggest challenge before India is to bring more financial inclusion and rise of the health care system as the country believes in healthcare for all. He also said that railway minister Shri Piyush Goyal is working to improve the facilities on the railways. About promotion of entrepreneurship and digital industry, the Prime Minister said that Niti Aayog will take the lead to provide the correct direction for promoting entrepreneurship, as India believes in every person being an entrepreneur. He added that Niti

Aayog will also develop a digital India to help resolve several challenges. On the Mahatma Gandhi's 150th Birth Anniversary, the Prime Minister said, "Gandhi ji took the lead on several issues like the nation's economic growth, poverty, and most importantly his thoughts revolutionised our thoughts and changed the social order of our country." On the role of institutions and the Centre,

The unique pathways of neural migration in the developing human retina are poorly understood. When this project was funded in early 2007, it represented the first step in studying neural migration from embryonic stem cells in a non-human model (reporter gene assays for Sox2, Brn3a, and Math1). The ultimate goal of the project was to identify the time and cell-type dependent signature of neural retinal progenitors and neural progenitor subtypes in human retinae. In the ensuing funding period, we used lineage tracing of cells derived from the embryonic stem cell to identify a population of multipotent, proliferating neural progenitors that express Math1, Brn3a and doublecortin. These progenitors give rise to neurons that are specified as in the retina. During the present competitive renewal, we propose to test the hypothesis that endogenous mouse-derived retinal progenitors, which we recently identified as belonging to the Math1+/Brn3a+/doublecortin+ population, are generated from a dorsal and ventral progenitor domain that differentiates into two distinct progenitor subtypes. These progenitors divide asymmetrically into a progenitor subtype that predominantly contributes to the ventral retina and produces excitatory neurons that are specified to cone and rod cells, and a progenitor subtype that primarily contributes to the dorsal retina and produces inhibitory neurons that are specified to rod cells. We further propose to define the nature of the signals within the retina that affect retinal progenitors as they divide and self-organize into the appropriate neuronal cell populations. We will use a combination of mouse genetics, cell lineage and organotypic explant assays, and biochemical screening of candidate regulators of neuronal differentiation. The long term objective of this research is to develop a more detailed understanding of neural development in the mammalian retina. Such a knowledge base should lead to the identification of novel genes and mechanisms that underlie the development of human retinal dysfunction.
