I've been a huge fan of Native Instruments software for years and have used each of the programs featured on this site in their previous versions. But the newness of the Elektrik Piano program makes the program feel fresh and exciting for me. This feeling is one of my favorite traits of this program. Other than the newness of Elektrik Piano I'm finding the program to be very functional and perform very well. This is the reason that I wanted to do a review of this program and provide the serial number and registration code that is posted to my site. I'm also happy that I can confirm that the product key or registration number for Elektrik Piano is a valid key for the trial version of this program. This website is not

Q: Django Rest Framework API - Prevent custom method to serialize others data I have custom method in my API to persist data, the API handle save data in db with the serializer. Now, I have some views that I want to implement custom logic, I don't want the custom method to be used there to save data. I can't use exclude_from_self() because it stop the method to serialize my data as it is a custom method. I have to add some logic to the custom method to exclude it from it, is it possible to do that? A: If you want to exclude some fields from serialization then you need to register your fields with Django REST framework. Fields which are registered will not be serialized by default and that's exactly what you want. I.e you should write something like this in your serializers.py from rest_framework import serializers class YourView(APIView): def get(self, request, *args, **kwargs): serializer = YourSerializer(YourModel.objects.all(), many=True) ... return Response(serializer.data) As you can see we use excluded_fields') and in your View you'll need to enable your serializer like that from rest_framework import serializers class YourView(APIView): def get(self, request, *args, **kwargs): serializer = YourSerializer(YourModel.objects.all(), many=True) ... return Response(serializer.data) As you can see we use many=True which is setting many=True for all fields that we want to serialize. BTW you can also use
