CyberLink PowerProducer 6 continues to lead the way among consumer video editing software. With each release it gets closer to professional-level apps. There isn't sufficient room here to discuss its entire vast feature set, including slideshows, disc menus, 3D editing, screen recording, content-aware features, and animated object design tools to name just a few. Its wealth of powerful tools would be enough to earn it a strong recommendation, but the combination of that with extremely fast rendering speed and an intuitive interface really give it the upper hand. The recent addition of a macOS version is yet another feather in its cap. CyberLink PowerDirector remains PCMag's Editors' Choice winner for enthusiast-level video-editing software, along with Corel VideoStudio and, for Mac users, Apple Final Cut Pro. CyberLink PowerProducer Ultra 6.0.7613.0 (383 Mb) is a program designed to create and complete multimedia products on HD disks, including Blu-ray discs and AVCHD DVD formats. The program has special tools for adding music to video clips, importing photos to create slideshows. There are also tools for color inversion, balancing balance, edge blurring, scene separation, menu addition, background, description and subtitles. Power Producer only includes basic editing functions for video material and a variety of different formats. With the release of the fifth version of this solution, the average user can create high-quality Blu-ray Disc and DVD AVCHD. Thanks to the support of the latest formats, the PowerProducer 6 package lets you quickly create and record home video recording with high resolution and professional quality of the end result.
